GENERAL INFORMATION

• An undergraduate degree in Public Administration, with the appropriate experience, is sufficient for entry-level positions in government and business.
• A graduate degree in public administration, public health administration, or business administration helps prepare students for management and upper-level positions. Research programs in order to choose specializations or concentrations of interest.
• Consider law school for careers in upper-level politics, administration, or management. Explore joint J.D. and M.P.A. programs to see if they meet your career goals.
• Obtain a broad liberal arts background including written and verbal communication, research, and language skills.
• Part-time, summer, internship, and volunteer experiences are extremely helpful to find positions in government affairs, nonprofit organizations or public service areas.
• Develop strong leadership skills; run for office in clubs and organizations in school or community. Volunteer to organize or lead an event or project.
• Get involved in Student Government. Assist with campus, local, or national campaigns to gain experience and build relationships.
• Demonstrate interest/involvement in community affairs and events.
• Join related professional organizations such as the American Society of for Public Administration (ASPA).
• Build a strong personal network through informal contacts. Political connections are helpful for appointed positions. Most agencies respond to professional connections.
• Expect keen competition for federal positions. Prepare yourself with a strong academic background and good experience. Seek the classes and experiences that will best prepare you.
• Develop patience, persistence, and drive in obtaining government positions.
• Explore application to government internship programs specifically for college students, such as the Pathways Program at the federal level.
• Research websites that address various government job opportunities, pay structure, and hiring processes.
• Consider military experience and training or the Peace Corps as an entryway into government jobs and public service.
• Plan on following a flexible career path to higher positions. Many people begin on the clerical or entry level in order to gain experience and network.
