STRATEGIES

Many international organizations value the historical and contemporary context of religions and cultures that one learns in religious studies.

Learn one or more foreign languages.

Plan to study, volunteer, or intern abroad more than one time if possible.

Seek cultural experiences on campus and get involved with the international student population.

Join relevant student organizations such as Amnesty International and gain leadership roles.

Develop excellent research, writing, communication, and organizational skills.

Participate in an international service learning experience or go on a mission trip.

Federal international jobs require careful observation of a formal hiring procedure. Apply for a federal government internship.

Government work in the foreign service requires passage of the Foreign Service Exam and adherence to a list of requirements.

Research the international organization/agency's structure and function.

Volunteer at relevant local social service agencies to gain experience and demonstrate interest.

Develop good working knowledge of international humanitarian law.

Demonstrate your depth of dedication, willingness to adapt, and coping mechanisms to combat stress and difficult situations.

Earn first aid certification to assist in disaster relief work with organizations such as the Red Cross.

Develop skills in the areas of organizing groups, efficiency, and the ability to calm people.

Earn a graduate degree in an area of interest to open more job opportunities. Religious studies provides a good background for a variety of graduate programs.

STRATEGIES

Obtain general knowledge of practices, procedures, guidelines, and doctrine of one's faith.
Gain an understanding of human spiritual and social needs. Demonstrate an openness to learn about other people's faith and multiple perspectives from different backgrounds.
Research requirements to enter leadership in the faith you want to pursue. Master of Divinity and denominational ordination are required for most clergy positions, for example.
Possess high moral and ethical standards.
Develop leadership ability and self discipline.
Hone communication skills, both oral and written.
To become a chaplain, obtain ordination and two years service in local church or after acceptance into branch of military service, attend chaplaincy school.
Earn any needed advanced degrees, certification,
or licensing in area of interest for missions.
Seek related experience by participating with missions groups.
Gain travel and cultural experience with group of interest. Foreign language skills are a plus.
Develop fundraising and budgeting skills.
People interested in religious vs. secular work possess deep faith, want more than filling one's own personal needs, and desire to make a difference.
Often more opportunities for specific ministries exist
in urban areas and large religious institutions.
Obtain experience and contacts through extensive involvement in campus organizations or local religious institutions. Leadership on the local, state, and regional level is crucial.
Seek camp experience to improve organization and counseling skills as well as network within the denominational/organizational structure.
Learn to work well with people of all different backgrounds and socioeconomic status.
Earn dual degrees where appropriate, e.g. music.

GENERAL INFORMATION

- Religious studies equips students with an understanding of global issues and trends in both historical and contemporary contexts. This understanding of multiculturalism and interculturalism is valued by a wide variety of employers in many industries including education, government, and business.
- Student who seek international careers may find that religious studies provides a good background in global issues.
- Many transferable skills such as analyzing and synthesizing data, research, communication skills, and critical thinking are associated with the religious studies degree.
- People who major in religious studies may or may not consider themselves "religious." Expertise in religious ideas can be a plus for secular work environments as well as more traditional religious ones.
- An undergraduate degree prepares students for professional and graduate study in business, law, medicine, counseling, higher education, and other fields. Check for prerequisite classes needed to enter various graduate programs.
- Obtaining relevant experience through internships or volunteer experiences is critical to finding employment opportunities. Dual majors or minors can also help open the door in some fields.
- Join relevant organizations and seek leadership roles.
